CONTINENTAL YOUTH CONSULTATION

THEME:
YOUTH LEADERSHIP FOR A RENEWED AFRICAN RENAISSANCE: A LEVER FOR BUILDING THE AFRICA WE WANT

DRAFT CONCEPT NOTE

2-3 DECEMBER 2021
VIRTUAL
I. CONTEXTUAL BACKGROUND

The transition of the Organisation of African Unity (OAU) to the African Union (AU) which created relatively stable governance and socio-economic progress was inspired by an African Renaissance which is a new form of Pan Africanism that encouraged - African Solutions for African Problems. In spite of the fact that Africa is experiencing progress, it has been riddled with conflicts of varying scale and magnitude that had adverse effects on citizens of the continent, especially youth. COVID-19 also added fuel to an already raging fire by exasperating inequality, revealing glaring realities of a fractured democratic governance system to the limelight and exposing the inability of states to support their own citizens. The continent has seen an upsurge of coups, mass protests, uprisings and active conflicts in several countries even during the ongoing global pandemic. Youth were at the centre of these protests because of the growing dissatisfaction with a non-inclusive and non-transformative economic and political governance.

On the other hand, Africa’s development Agenda – Agenda 2063 was enacted as a testament for the commitment of leaders to guarantee Africa’s continued robust growth that takes full advantage of its youthful population. Aspiration 6 of Agenda 2063 underlines the crucial role African citizens play as the driving force for the growth of the continent, stating the Africa We want is “an Africa whose development is people-driven, relying on the potential of African people, especially its women and youth and caring for children”. Undoubtedly, making Agenda 2063 a reality necessitates visionary leadership with the skills, temperament and conviction to reimagine the civic, public and private sector machinery. 21st-century transformative leadership skills are required to anticipate, respond and contribute to the achievement of the Africa We Want.

Furthermore, achieving the Africa We Want in light of the rapidly changing global dynamics requires a paradigm shift and a renewal of Pan-Africanism and African Renaissance spearheaded by young people. In 2013, the African Union dedicated a discussion on the topic in an effort to enhance the awareness of the new generation of Africans about the ideals of Pan-Africanism. These discussions are long overdue, and there is also a realization that ideas of Pan-Africanism and African Renaissance will need to engender the participation of the young generation.

The African Union through the theme of the year is resuscitating discussions on Pan-African Renaissance and African Renaissance. The theme of the year for 2021, “Arts, Culture and Heritage: Levers for Building the African We Want,” places emphasis on the importance of Arts, Culture and Heritage as a bedrock for a Pan-African Renaissance. This theme specifically draws inspiration from Aspiration 5 of Agenda 2063 and recognizes the role young people play in strengthening culture, identity and values for Africa’s emergence on the global stage, creating a common destiny, African identity and Pan-African consciousness by enlisting young people as drivers of change.¹

Conscripting young people as beacons for African Renaissance needs a strong political leadership fully committed to the development, democratic rule, equity, justice and rule of law² as prescribed by the Agenda 2063 framework. The bridge between the youth demographic bulge and the required dividend lies on the continent’s adequately skilled and capacitated workforce that will be capable of driving Africa’s Renaissance with strong socio-economic and political leadership. To do this, a new breed of young leaders with a Pan-African Consciousness need to arise with an impeccable knack for Afro-Centric policymaking that enhances democratic governance and peace, integration and technological awakening that will unlock new opportunities for citizens of the continent.

It is in light of this new dawn, that the African Union through the African Governance Architecture Platform is engaging in programs that have the potential to enhance the creation of cohorts of Pan-African young leaders that can work to resolve Africa’s democratic governance issues, upholding the ideals of African Renaissance while prioritizing the best interest of Africans instilled by the revolutionary heroes and heroines.

II. RATIONALE

Young people have played leadership roles throughout history in liberation movements and post-liberation democratization struggles by amplifying popular struggles for democracy, human rights and justice. Youth have shown considerable commitment to African Renewal by becoming the heartbeat of citizens and expressing their concerns by using different platforms. They have organized themselves online and on the ground to make their voices heard.

Regression in democratic governance nonetheless has not impressed the masses of young Africans who perceive leadership and growth reported as non-inclusive and non-transformative. The growing dissatisfaction of young people presents an immediate challenge which is creating a growing number of frustrated mushrooming youth population that is largely unemployed, poor and restless accounting for approximately 75% of the entire population of Africa. Even though leadership in the context of Africa’s 21st Century problems is both complex and challenging, young people are up to the task. Young people crave moral leadership, transformative and informed leadership that puts the interest of citizens first.

Let us face the true concerns of youth, there is indeed a leadership lacuna that is immersed in ideals of the African Renaissance which is taking the continent in reverse. The year 2021 has witnessed more military takeovers, civil wars and popular protests. Reviving discussions on the African Renaissance that put citizens, especially youth at the centre is necessary. Africa needs more hands on deck to provide solutions, and young people can discuss and identify opportunities to deliver on the vision of the Africa We Want.

Indisputably, the process of raising a new set of African young leaders with the skills that are necessary to drive the implementation of Agenda 2063 should be a key priority. The responsibility of driving Africa’s development agenda should be anchored on Young leaders who are deliberately and systematically cultivated for leadership on the continent. There is a need for a collective examination of what has worked, take lessons from what didn’t and define Africa’s path into the next millennium. The actual task of realizing Africa’s aspirations rests squarely on the shoulders of the next generation of Africans. It is a must, therefore, to prepare Africa’s successor generation for the challenges of the 21st century. Youth have led, organized and strategized movements that have imparted lasting changes in communities by exercising adaptive leadership, intensifying their agency to build an Africa they want now more than ever.

It is in light of this that the African Union is facilitating a discussion to foster a shared understanding, create intergenerational dialogue and experience sharing on the importance of youth leadership for the renewal of African Renaissance. The discussions will facilitate open and frank conversations for young people in preparation to take the mantle of leadership. More importantly, they will emerge with a set of values that will guide their leadership styles based on Pan-African principles, integrity and African Renaissance.

It is therefore based on the aforementioned narratives that the 2021 AU continental youth consultation is organized that under the auspices of the African Governance Architecture Youth Engagement Strategy(YES) spearheaded by the Secretariat on behalf of the African Governance Platform. The consultation is organized under the theme – ‘Youth Leadership for a renewed African Renaissance’ The Continental Youth Consultation is scheduled to take place virtually from 2-3 December 2021.
