Discussion Panel 1: Tax, IFFs and the Global Financial Architecture

Africa has shown remarkable leadership in the current discussions on the reform of the global financial architecture. In May 2022, the African Ministers of Finance, Planning, and Economic Development adopted a resolution calling on the UN to start negotiations towards an international convention on tax matters under the auspices of the UN. This initiative gained momentum in November 2022, when the African Group, led by Nigeria, proffered a revised resolution at the United Nations focusing on the "Promotion of inclusive and effective international tax cooperation at the United Nations." On the 30th of December 2022, the United Nations General Assembly adopted Resolution 77/244, emphatically advocating the advancement of inclusive and effective cooperation on tax matters. In Nov 2023, a revised resolution as tabled by Nigeria on behalf of the Africa Group was put to a vote, where 125 countries endorsed the resolution, 48 countries voted against it, and 9 countries abstained. Since then, the process of drafting the TORs for the UN Tax Convention has begun through an Ad Hoc Intergovernmental Committee whose bureau is currently chaired by Egypt. There is a clear momentum in Africa pushing for reforms but much more needs to be done at the national, regional, and international levels in mobilizing African countries to advance common reform positions that will protect Africa's tax bases and contribute to curbing illicit financial flows.

Discussion Panel 4: The Role of Supreme Audit Institutions on Combatting IFFs: Case Studies

Given the complexity of the recovery of funds from IFFs, it is undeniably necessary to initiate actions upstream. These actions focus on prevention mechanisms through awareness raising and, above all, establishing mechanisms to monitor financial movements and creating strong and independent institutions in charge of the fight against corruption. However, one of the significant challenges for African countries is the coordination and harmonization of responses to IFFs at national and regional levels. In some cases, there is overlap between the different agencies involved in the fight against corruption, money laundering, drug enforcement and other illicit economic and financial activities, while in other cases, their roles need to be clearly defined and delineated. The low level of collaboration within public institutions and with private institutions somewhat hinders the ability of countries to prevent IFFs effectively. Therefore, the exchanges and discussions organized around this panel discussion should allow, on the one hand, a regional perspective of the challenges that hinder the prevention of IFFs and, on the other hand, for countries to share their experiences on the appropriate mechanisms to curb these challenges.

Discussion Panel 6: Pioneering Approaches to Asset Recovery and Financial Reintegration in Africa

The fight against Illicit Financial Flows (IFFs) focuses on the repatriation or recovery of funds and assets illicitly taken from the African continent. Achieving this goal necessitates cooperation from destination states, often developed countries with low tax burdens or jurisdictions known for harbouring tax havens. Tracing, freezing, confiscating, and returning stolen assets is intricate, spanning multiple jurisdictions and frequently hindered by technical, legal, or political challenges. Regional mechanisms like the Common African Position on Asset Recovery (CAPAR) and international frameworks support the repatriation efforts. The HLP has also highlighted some success stories by some African countries in this sphere. Notably, initiatives like the Stolen Asset Recovery Initiative (StAR), a partnership between the World Bank and the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime, have been pivotal in supporting international efforts to combat these opaque transfers. Through sharing experiences and strategies, the discussions aim to bolster the continent's capacity to reclaim its assets and curb the detrimental impact of IFFs on its development.

Discussion Panel 7: Measuring Illicit Financial Flows for Evidence-Biased Policy Making

This session addresses the vital need for precise measurement of illicit financial flows (IFFs) to enable effective policymaking. In collaboration with the Economic Commission for Africa (ECA), the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime (UNODC), and the Economic Commission for Latin America and the Caribbean (ECLAC), UNCTAD has developed a statistical methodology to estimate IFFs. This initiative is critical in providing the evidence necessary for crafting targeted policy responses and enhancing the ability of countries to track and assess the impact of policies aimed at combating IFFs. A key feature of this effort is the pilot testing of UNCTAD's "Methodological Guidelines to Measure Tax and Commercial Illicit Financial Flows" in various countries, including eleven in Africa, aimed at refining these measurement methods. The session will focus on the implications of these measurements for policy development aimed at curbing IFFs in Africa. It will also highlight the coordinated efforts required to ensure effective evidence-based policy making in this field. Discussions will cover the ongoing initiatives and the necessary collaborative actions.

In this Panel, our panellists will collectively address this interplay between ESG and IFF, which is critical to all the stakeholders. The focus of this Panel will be: i) To clarify the underlying concepts of ESG, ii) To determine metrics for ESG measurement and applications in IFFs mitigation, iii) to Explain the connection between ESG and IFFs, iv) Explain how individual components of ESG enable more robust risk management and curb IFFs. v) Propose an ESG IFF framework that African countries can implement.

It will explore comprehensive strategies to mitigate TOC's destabilizing effects, foster conditions conducive to peace, enhance domestic resource mobilization and catalyze socio-economic advancement. The Panel's focus will extend to discussions on bolstering institutional frameworks, magnifying the influence of civil society organizations, and refining the investment environment. Central to this dialogue will be the unveiling of Team Europe's initiative, ambitiously crafted to back Africa's fight against IFFs, including money laundering, terrorism financing, TOC, human or wildlife trafficking, and tax and trade based IFFs. The focus shall be to holistically discuss prevention, investigation, asset recovery and coordination aspects with a threefold approach: fortifying legal foundations, augmenting law enforcement and judicial efficacy, and amplifying regional and international collaboration. Discussion Panel 10: Contribution of Citizens and Private Sector in the fight against Illicit Financial Flows

To effectively fight IFF, a range of different stakeholders need to be involved. While the majority of the responsibility falls on governments to create an effective framework for the fight against IFF, non-state actors are essential allies as well. The private sector and civil society organizations (CSOs) are important actors in this regard. The private sector is often thought of as complicit in generating IFFs, for example through transfer pricing. CSOs often struggle with organizational challenges, poor access to information, the complexity of the topic and increasingly shrinking spaces through overregulation - the so-called unintended consequences of the implementation of international standards. In light of these challenges, this session discusses how the essential role of both stakeholders can be fully harnessed in the fight against IFF. The private sector, especially the banking sector, may act as a gatekeeper to prevent and disrupt IFFs. Civil society can raise awareness and sensitize citizens and other relevant stakeholders and propose innovative ideas for action. Governments need to create an enabling environment that allows both the private sector and CSO to utilize their comparative advantages and contribute to the fight against IFF.

Discussion Panel 11: Unlocking Africa's Potential: Innovative Strategies for Effective Resource Mobilization and Sustainable Development

The ability of the African continent to mobilize financial resources is a strong predictor of its capability to achieve the goals spelt out in the African Union (A.U.) Agenda 2063 and the (U.N.) Agenda 2030, with Domestic Resource Mobilization (DRM) being a key driver of sustainable development. Despite challenges from the COVID-19 pandemic, geopolitical conflicts, and climate change, DRM is expected to fund between 75% to 90% of Agenda 2063. However, Africa's projected GDP growth of 4% in 2023 is hindered by high levels of tax under-collection and Illicit Financial Flows (IFFs). Tax revenue under-collection in the region is high, with IFFs identified as one of the main obstacles, deriving primarily from tax evasion, tax avoidance, and base erosion and profit shifting (BEPS) activities. Therefore, the impact of illicit financial flows on DRM is very high. This Panel aims to share experience on the initiatives set up by African governments and international organizations to mobilize domestic resources and optimize tax collection, win the fight against corruption, and strengthen tax cooperation to stem IFFs.
